at Singapore, how much more likely are similar attempts to be made in this Colony. For any legitimate purpose of the Chinese Government a Consul at Hongkong is unnecessary. So far as the protection of the Chinese revenue is concerned, the Colony has already assented to arrangements by which the Foreign branch of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs is afforded fanilities for the collection of the duties justly payable on goods imported into China from Hongkong. Those arrangements have proved mutually beneficial. Smuggling has been discouraged and legitimate trade thereby promoted, and the Colony has agreement arrived at in 1886. THE WORSHIP OF THE EMPEROR.

The following article by the Rev. H. Biodusti, D.D., Missionary of the American Board, appars in the New York Independent:- --The Emperor returned this morning from his vership of Heaven at the winter solstice. There on a magnificent round alter, constructed of white marble, under the open sky, without any image, using only a table upon which is inscribed n gilt letters. "the throne of Imperial Hanven, the Supreme Ruler," with libations of wine, with burnt offering of an entire bullock, with twenty-four offerings of various kinds of viands and cereals, an offering of jade stone and silk, this young man, as head and high priest of the many millions of China, in accordance with customs handed down for more than four thousand years; has paid his devotions to high

A great controversy has raged among Chris-tions in regard to this worship a controversy which to this day divides, most deeply and wide ly, the Protestant missionaries of China. For one hundred and twenty years this controver y agitated the missions of the Roman Church is China, and engaged the at ention of some of the 1 ading minds in Europe. The Jesuits contended that this is the worship of the true God; that this Shang-Ti (Supreme Ruler) is the God of the Scriptures; that upon this we are to build the superstructure of Christian theism and Christion doctrine, removing only the pagan acoretions which have grown up around worship. The other view, and that which fleally provailed in the church of Rome, was that the worship of Heaven, or Shang Tir could not be accepted as the basis of Christian theise; that the Chinese were atheistic, or, in our more modern way of speaking, pantheistic, is their worship; that' therefore the word Ties Chu must be used for God, and not the term employed by the Emperor of China for the chief object of his worship, namely, Heaven or Shang Ti. Chere are those who seem to forget that it is is much a part of the imperial ritual to worship Imperial Earth at the summer solstice as it is to worship Imperial Heaven at the winter for tice, and that the Earth is worshipped .. ith the -ame offerings and ceremonies as is Heaven; that with both the ancestors of the Emperor are worshipped with Earth; that the sun, the moon, the five planets, the "twenty-eight" constellations, all the sters of heaven, the wind, the clouds, the rain, the thunder, are all worshipped with ! enven; that the high mountains, the four great rivers. the east side of Peking at the vernal are nor, and the moon on the west side of the city at the antumnal equinox, and that this Imp rial vorship is pervaded in every part by the dualistic system of the Chinese philosophy, and has been

It seems difficult to see in all this worship, which represents the historic religion of Cuina, and is thoroughly Confecian, anything other than the worship of Nature, and of the various parts of Nature pervaded by a certain force, or forces, represented sometimes with greater, at other times with less, of personality; yet a worship always pantheistic never rising to the dignity of the worship of the true God, who created the heavens and the earth, and was beore all, as well as is in all and through all, Such, after long and weary discussion, was the lesision of the Church of Rome. Had the early Protestant missionaries to China accepted the results of that discussion, there would have been, and would be now, no "Term Controversy." Had they known more of the old controversy perhaps they would have accepted its results. Why not use the same word for God which the Roman Catholies use, as well in China as in the United States, or in Great Britain F. Why use a word which they have rejected, as involving a compromise with paganism? Neander's words in regard to the Manicheaus

n China:---"In those Nature-religions, instead of the idea the personal, living God, such as he declares himself to be in revelation, the pantheistic view predominates. Hence the seeming resemblance must transform itself into an essential differ nce and if those old religious, in consideration of such a supposed relationship, were to be transported into Christianity, it could be no otherwise effected than by severing Christianity itself from its natural connection with the preparatory revelation of religion in Judaism, and by fusing it with nantheistic Nature-religion, transforming it ought certainly to be considered by missionaries into an entirely different thing. During the last thirty years not a few Protestant missionaries have adopted the word for God which the Roman Catholics use; and they seem to see in this course unity in the fature in regard to the word for God in China, quity of the whole Church, and great gain in orthodox teaching.

ern carrying trude. In discussing the result which the construction of the railway would have from a commercial point of view the correspondent writes :- Of all the industries of Eastern Siberia, probably the most important is the gold mining industry. The richest washings and mines are these of Yrneseisk and Olekminsk, but the yield of metal at these places, owing to the present primitive and wasteful method of extracting it, is not nearly so large as it might be. Mining engineers coloniate that when the railway is constructed, and it is possible to transport hydraulic gold-washing machinery, they will be able to save at from 25 per cent, to 80 per cent, of the gold which is now wasted. When these imbroved methods of extracting the metal have been adopted, they are confident that the yield will be about double what it now is. At | O. present, owing to the immedse distance of the washings of fastern Siberia from Russia, it is not considered profitable to work "washings," unless they produce five times as much gold as the least profitable of the washings in the Urals. It is easy to see, then, that the railway will give ON BOMBAY .an immense impetus to the gold mining industries of Eastern Siberia. A regular gold fever may, indeed, he expected to set in. Few people ! have any idea of the amount of gold which has been obtained already from Eastern and Central

At a meeting of the Russian Geographical Society on December 5, 1890, General Voloshenoffs, of the Army Staff, gave some interesting information on the subject. From the official figures which he furnished, it appears that from the year 1834 to 1887 the quantity of gold produced amounted to 29,82,000 troy ounces. The Banks figures for 1838 and 1889 were not given, except as regards the Amoor - Provinces and the gold region known as Premorsky, bordering on the Pacific. In those years these districts yielded 203,000 and 242,000 onness respectively. Adding these to the figures previously given, we obtain a grand total of 30.270,000 cunces. AN HOUR IN THIBET.

Prince Henry D'Orleans and M. Bonvalot are Hongkong Rope....... exhibiting at the museum of the Jardin des H. & W. Dock......... Plantes in Paris the collection which they brought with them from their recent journey to Thib st. The exhibition, which is exceedingly interesting, was inaugurated on the 3rd inst. when both the Prince and his fellow-traveller were present to explain to the visitors the various features of interest in the collection, which occupies two salcons. In the centre of the principal room is a large stuffed wild yak, which was killed by Prince Henry on the Thibetan plateau. The museum at St. Petersburg is the only other place in Europe possessing a specimen of this kind. This wild yak of Thibet is an animal analogous to the American bison, but much larger. In the same room are stuffed bears, antelopes, panthers, wild cats, white foxes, and flying equirrels. The collection of birds includes white pheasants, a blue raven, and different birds of prey. The collection of plants includes an unknown v riety of the precious spikenard. In another room are costumes of Thibetan priests and commoners, one of them being very similar to that of a Roman warri r. The collection of boots has a glass case all to itself. They are mostly yellow and red; the colours of the predominant religious sects, the members of whom are distinguished, not by the colour of their turbans, as in Egypt, but by the colours of their shoes. The fanna and flora of Thi et are represented by countless specimens, from a yak and a wild horse down to the timest-humming bird. The collection of clothes, domestic implements and such rude works of art as native artisans produce, is so complete that a native of Lhassa coming to Paris would have no difficulty in providing himself and family with outlits, and in setting up house. Prince Henry, in the course of this long and trying journey, took 700 photographs of scenery and people. The most interesting of these have been onlarged, and are far more eloquent than any written description. How was all this brought soross Asia? M. Bonvalot says that his caravan at the outset included sixty yaks.
